PRESENTATION

STEP 1:- IDENTIFICATION OF PRIOR IDEAS

Mode: Individual

TEACHERS ACTIVITIES:- The teacher asks the question, what is a noun?

STUDENTS ACTIVITIES:- The students respond by saying that a noun is a name of a person, animal, place or thing.

STEP II:- EXPLORATION

Mode: Individual

TEACHERS ACTIVITIES:- The teacher asks the students to give words that can replace names of people and thing.

STUDENTS ACTIVITIES:- The students respond by giving words like he/she, it.

STEP III:- DISCUSSION

Mode: Entire class

TEACHERS ACTIVITIES:- The teacher with the instructional resources guides the students on the following:

A pronoun can be described as a replacement for a noun to avoid repetition.

TYPES OF PRONOUNS INCLUDE!

1)PERSONAL PRONOUNS:- They are:

- i)First person: The person speaking Eg I (singular) plural/we
- ii)Second person: The person or thing spoken to Eg You.
- iii)Third person: The person or thing that is spoken about or that is being discussed. Eg He, she, it plural they.

2)DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS:- These are this, that (singular) these, those (plural)

- * This is my father
- * These are my friends
- * Those are my brothers standing across the road.

3)POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS:- These are called possessive pronouns because they indicate possession. Eg My, mine, our, ours, yours, her, hers, his, theirs, their, its.

i) The principal has refused to release our bags (noun)

Our (a possessive pronoun) functions as an adjective qualifying the noun bags.

ii) Her father is the new minister of education. Her qualifies the noun father. However, if there is a verb between the possessive pronoun and a noun, it will perform the function of a pronoun, as in the following sentences:

a) Theirs is a unique case

Theirs functions as the subject of the verb is.

b) The building across the road is ours

Ours functions as the subject complement.

4)INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS:- They are used to ask questions. Eg What, who, where, when, whose, whom, which.

* What is your name?

* Which of the building is yours?

* Who sent you on this dangerous journey?

5)REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS:- They make reference to the subject in the sentence. Eg himself, herself, myself, itself, themselves, ourselves, yourselves.

* My mother washes her clothes herself.

Herself still refers to 'my mother' who is the subject in the sentence.

Note: Reflexive pronouns are called emphasizing pronouns when they occur immediately after the subject in the sentence.

Examples

i)My mother herself washes her clothes

ii)The president himself visited the scene of the crisis.

6)RELATIVE PRONOUNS:- These are the same set of pronouns under interrogative pronouns. Here the relative pronouns are used to introduce relative clause. These are who, whom, which, which, that, whose, when, where etc.

Examples

* The man who was detained is now president.

* This is the house where I was born.

* The landlord whose house was burgled has reported to the police

* The dress which my husband bought for me suits my shape.

7)INDEFINITE PRONOUNS:- They do not refer to particular or specific people or things. They are used in general sense. Eg some, somebody, one, someone, no one, everybody, none, all, everyone, everything, many, several, few, more, much, any, both, either etc.

* None of the students was present at the seminar

* Somebody is here to see the manager

* Everybody is free to go home now

* Tell me more

* One must remember the incident

Note: (i) A singular indefinite pronoun should not be referred to as if it were a plural. For example, it is incorrect to say: 'Everyone must have their fair share of the blame'. The correct thing to say is that: 'Everyone must have his fair share of the blame'. (ii) It is equally wrong to switch from the indefinite pronoun one to another pronoun. For instance, it is incorrect to say: 'One must not miss his chance. The correct thing to say is: 'One must not miss one's chance.'

8) RECIPROCAL PRONOUNS:- These indicate an exchange of an action between two or more people. These are: each other and one another.

Each other refers to two people.

E.g Dayo and Sola fought each other.

One another refers to more than two.

E.g The candidates taught one another in the hall.

9) CASE: NOMINATIVE AND OBJECTIVE PRONOUNS:- Some pronouns are nominative pronouns. They can only be used to function as subjects of verbs in sentences. Some other ones are objective pronouns; they function only as objects in sentences.

Nominative pronouns are used as subjects of verbs.

Examples

- I walk down the road every day.
- You come to visit once in a while.
- He comes to visit once in a while.

STUDENTS ACTIVITIES:- The students respond by making sentences with examples of the types of pronouns.

STEP IV:- APPLICATION

Mode: Individual

TEACHERS ACTIVITIES:- The teacher asks the students to make sentence with the types of pronouns.

STUDENTS ACTIVITIES:- The students respond to the teachers question by making sentences thus:

Indefinite pronouns

Everybody is free to go home

One must remember the incident

Reflexive pronouns

My mother washes her clothes herself.

STEP V:- EVALUATION
