

ADJUNCT OF MANNER AND REASON

An adjunct is a word, phrase, or clause that adds extra information to a sentence. It is not compulsory to the meaning of the sentence, and it can usually be removed without destroying the grammatical structure.

ADJUNCT OF MANNER

An Adjunct of Manner tells us how an action is performed.

It answers the question: How?

Examples:

She spoke softly.

The students worked carefully.

He completed the task with confidence.

They fought bravely.

Forms of Adjunct of Manner:

Adverbs – quickly, slowly, neatly, badly

Prepositional phrases – with joy, in anger, by force

Noun phrases – this way, that way

ADJUNCT OF REASON

An Adjunct of Reason tells us why something happens.

It answers the question: Why?

Examples:

She was absent because of illness.

He was punished for coming late.

They celebrated due to their success.

She cried because she was tired.

Forms of Adjunct of Reason:

Prepositional phrases – because of the rain, due to hunger

Infinitive phrases – to gain admission

Adverbial clauses – because he was sick, since it rained

Difference Between Adjunct of Manner and Reason

Adjunct of Manner:

1. Tells how something happens
2. Answers How?
3. Often uses adverbs

Adjunct of Reason:

1. Tells why something happens
2. Answers Why?
3. Often uses "because," "due to," "for," etc.