

SS 1 ENGLISH LANGUAGE WEEK TWO

Speech: Oral Composition: Narrative Essay

A narrative essay is a story, a tale, or an account of something that has happened and which one is telling to another person. It may be factual (true account) of what really happened or imaginary (made up by the narrator)

Topics related to narrative

1. How I spent my last holiday
2. How I escaped being kidnapped
3. Story that illustrate the saying “It pays to be discipline.
4. Story that illustrate the saying “a stitch in time saves nine”.

Features of good narrative essay

1. Title: It should have a good captivating and relevant to the event narrated
2. Introduction: It should have a good and interesting beginning
3. The body: It should have few characters that can be effectively handled.
4. Such essay must be written in the past tense.

Note: for a good narrative essay, the following should be answered.

- a. What is the story about?
- b. What actions took place in your story?
- c. Who were responsible for those actions
- d. When did the action take place?
- e. How did the action happen?
- f. What were the consequences?

Assignment

In not less than 450 words, write a story that illustrate “a stitch in time saves nine or prevention is better than cure.

Topic 2: Vocabulary: Words Associated with Advertising

Advertising is a form of selling. Messages from manufacturers and advertisers reach the customers through the media.

Consumers need products. Manufacturers produce goods or brands with the intention to sell them by making them available at reasonable prices.

Some relevant words are:

Consumer: one who buys goods and services

Advertisement: a public announcement of a product or services to call attention to it

Bill-board: notice board on which information is placed

Newsletter: a periodic printed report that contains news of interest to a specific group like a society or employee

Discount: a reduction in the usual price of something

Commercials: activity that is related to buying and selling of goods and services

End-users: a person or group that is one of the consumers for whom the product was made.

Advertising: Agency a company that handles clients who need their services

Assignment

Write ten more words related to advertising

Topic 3: Structure: Types of Sentence by Functions

According to function we have the following types of sentence

- a. The declarative sentence.

This is statement or a declaration. Examples:

My principal is a gentleman

Kemi did not do her work.

- b. The interrogative sentence

This is a question. Examples:

How are you?

Did you sleep well?

- c. The imperative sentence.

This is a command. Example:

Get out of her

Do as you are told.

Note: that the subject of an imperative sentence is often not stated but it can be implied.

You get out of her.

d. The exclamatory sentence

This is an exclamation expressing emotions such as wonder, surprise, alarm, gratitude etc. It is normally introduced by what, how and has an exclamation mark at the end.

What a beautiful house that is!

How kind of you to have come!

Volitive sentence

This is used to express wish.

May it be well with you.

May God bless you.

Assignment

Give more examples of each type of sentence by function