

Note

Clauses

A clause is a group of words that contains a subject and a predicate (verb).

Types of Clauses

1. Independent Clause

An independent clause expresses a complete thought and can stand alone as a sentence.

Examples:

The baby cried loudly.

My father repaired the car.

We enjoyed the match.

2. Dependent Clause

A dependent clause does not express a complete thought and cannot stand alone. It usually begins with subordinating conjunctions such as:

because although when

if since while

Examples:

because she was ill

when the bell rang

although they tried hard

Example in a Sentence:

The girl smiled because she passed the examination.

Independent Clause: The girl smiled

Dependent Clause: because she passed the examination
